

EngIn Program: Empowering Through Education

For the past two years, I have been part of the EngIn program, teaching English to students from Ukraine. This journey has been one of dedication and mutual learning, where each lesson is not just about language but about connection, cultural exchange, and personal growth.

Every week, I commit one hour to guiding my student through the nuances of English, from grammar to conversation skills. Over time, I have witnessed remarkable progress, not only in language proficiency but also in the confidence and independence my student has gained.

This experience has taught me the value of patience, adaptability, and the power of education to change lives. It's not just about teaching a language; it's about opening doors, bridging gaps, and building a brighter future for someone whose world has been disrupted.
